The College of Health, Science and Technology readies students to improve the well-being of individuals, communities and the world through cutting-edge practices and technology, fostering a deeply personalized approach to education.

The college creates opportunities for collaboration between disciplines to provide well-rounded experiences for our students and research opportunities, resulting in minds ready to tackle the big issues faced by our local and global communities.

The college's mission is to foster a community of students, faculty and staff committed to excellence in student-centered science education and training. We strive to create a diverse and inclusive scientific community that values collaboration, excellence in teaching, student and faculty research and strong linkages between foundational sciences and their application.
